We know that the day consists of different events. Some happen throughout the day while the whole city is moving, working, living. Some happen at night when nobody suspects anything and when most people sleep. But there still is some activity in the city in the time period from 10 p.m. till 6 a.m.: somebody goes to the airport to make it on time for the last flight and some people even go to school. The puzzle links together different parts of this day, just like different streets and houses are connected with one another in the city.

The city is a living body, even a planet, and we sometimes get lost in its maze. For some people, everything in the city goes in cycle. They get up in the morning and go to work; there they fight for their salaries and compete for new clients, and then they go back to their families and go to bed. Then everything repeats again. This cycle exists in the life of any person, and since a circle doesn't have an end, one can keep going round it for ages. Here the city is depicted as some kind of a body with houses and people who live and move there. These people are part of this body, they feed it and make it complete. That's how the body grows. This city wouldn't exist without us, people.

The same things that happen during the day can happen at night, too. It seems to us that going to a casino is what should be done at night, but you can lose your money there during the day as well. That will be a shame. But it's a city. Everybody is determined to get their own benefit, like brokers or politicians who set their own law and order. Each person is ready to do anything to gain possession of the city, but nobody will ever be able to do it.

One more manifestation of the night and day life of the city. The last train departs from an empty metro station at night, and people arrive home. During the day people hurry to work, shoulder one another in the line in order to get into a trolley, or stand in traffic jams. But some choose to make graffiti, or put the stickers on the walls, roofs and in other places.
