

<http://www.art-edu-studio.com/semiofor/ekaterina-t.html>

The city is a separate organism living in a rhythm set by the people. When you get into that rhythm you find yourself immersed in a cycle of events that doesn't stop even for a minute.

We are used to playing roles and being sincere and honest only when we are alone with ourselves.

<http://www.art-edu-studio.com/semiofor/ekaterina-t.html>

In the city the information spreads just as quickly as the water in the water supply system. So filtering the information we get is just as important as filtering water.

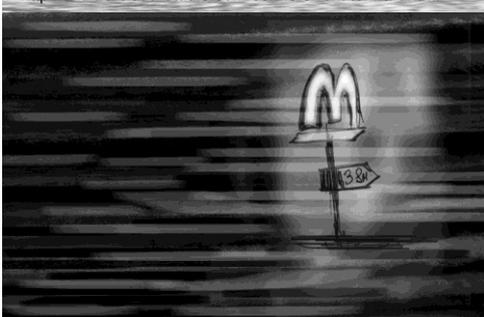

<http://www.art-edu-studio.com/semiofor/ekaterina-t.html>

You need to look for solitude in big cities. But you will always be lonely in your individuality.

<http://www.art-edu-studio.com/semiofor/ekaterina-t.html>

In the rush hour the city turns into one big mechanism that breathes exhaust fumes and where cars run along the streets thus supporting the city's inner energy, similar to how the human blood-vascular system functions.

<http://www.art-edu-studio.com/semiofor/ekaterina-t.html>

In the big cities we don't have time for high-quality productive life; therefore we exchange it for the artificial one and hardly ever know the difference.

<http://www.art-edu-studio.com/semiofor/ekaterina-t.html>

When you are in the crowd, there's no future and no past. There's only the present moment... no first or last names; just feelings... you are a Nobody. Just a vague image in the eyes of the time.